

Paul Cullen & Andy Thomson

Tower Theory

Oct 20 - Nov 10

Tower Theory is an installation, a conflation of a sometimes synchronized, and at other times, syncopated interaction of ideas, aesthetics, and actions. The work will explore how ideas or theories of space, form, structure and signification, can generate a work of art within the expanded fields of painting, sculpture, and collaborative installation.

PAUL CULLEN currently lives and works in Auckland, New Zealand. His art practice is located in a strategy of fabricational ploys directed, principally, towards an investigation of space and objects.

ANDY THOMSON currently lives and works in Auckland, New Zealand. His art practice has been sustained by an interest in the nature and perception of the real, he is also interested in how artists' sense of (cultural and personal) identity and ownership of their ideas and artwork can be extended and enriched through a collaborative process of art production and its presentation within the social.

Acknowledgements

Jacques Derrida, and his translator Alan Bass, for his writing and difference.

Jasmine Duthie for making the video.

Jake Carter for his endless generosity and help.

Laresa Kosloff, Paul Higgins & Daniel Von Sturmer.

Benji Bradley, international invigilator.